John S. Wood, cook of the American ship Nellie Ware, who had been charged by the Captain, Seorge Ashbury, with refusing to do duty on a late voyage of the vessel from Rio to this port, was held resterday by Commissioner Shields to await the tion of the Grand Jury. The defendant admitted that he refused to do duty, but stated that the Captain wanted him to perform work of an objecenable nature—that he required him to make a clam chowder for twenty men out of twenty-five lams and a pint of clam juice, and that he had also commanded him to feed and wait upon his (the Captain's) dog. This is the defendant's vertion of the affair, and it will be for the Grand Jury to say whether they believe it or not.

A suit has been commenced in the United States Circuit Court by Charles Morton against Henry C. Jarrett and Henry C. Palmer, lessees of Niblo's Garden. The action is orought by plaintiff against the defendants to recover from them a sum of $30,000 as damages, which the plaintiff alleges he has sustained in consequence of an imputed breach of contract. Mr. Morton says, in his bill of complaint, that he made a contract with the defendants to engage an Opera Bouffe Company, of which Miss Soldene was to be the principal artiste. The company were, according to this engagement, to produce at Niblo's "Geneviève de Brabant," "Fleur te Lieu of Oriel and "Chilperic," and the plaintiff charges he has sustained great loss by reason of having made engagements with members of the Opera Bouffe Company, they having had to cancel other engagements, and the plaintiff having taken passages for the company on board the Cunard steamer Java. The defence, it appears, is, that the plaintiff was telegraphed to in England, almost immediately after the contract had been made, for the purpose of having it cancelled, on the ground that, if the arrangement were carried pat according to its terms, it would result in loss to both parties in consequence of the panic prevailing at the time in financial matters in New

THE KING-O'NEILL TRAGEDY.

Only Eight Jurors Obtained-Line of the Defence.

Before Judge Brady.

The work of procuring a jury in the trial of James C. King for the alleged murder of Anthony F. D'Neill, now in progress in the Court of Oyer and Ferminer, before Judge Brady, is getting along sery slowly. Out of the extra panel of 100 jurors ordered for yesterday only forty-seven answered to their names. All of these were examined, the formula of questions being the same as heretofore. While many have already, from reading the accounts of the homicide in the papers, formed such decided spinions in the case that it would take very strong evidence to remove the impressions thus formed and while one juror went so far as to say that he thought the case one of wilful murder and that the prisoner should be made an example of, by far the greater majority were set aside through distrust of the plea of temporary insanity. of, by far the greater majority were set aside through distrust of the plea of temporary insanity. The name of the addi ional juror obtained yesterday was Serville J. Delano, jeweller. No. 42 Seventa street. The jurors were ordered by Judge Brady to be kept in charge of officers at the Astor House over to-day. If any one, however, has pressing business at home requiring his attention he will be allowed to transact it under the surveillance of an officer. The jurors are also allowed to attend church if they desire. Meantime a new panel has been ordered for Monday, and it is expected that one or two days more will serve to complete the jury. Thus far the prosecution have used eleven peremptory challenges, and the affence fitteen, they being allowed thirty peremptory challenges on a side. The case will be opened by Mr. John O. Mott, who has done the principal work of preparing the case thus far. He has protured a mass of testimony touching hereditary insanity in the family, and upon this branch of the case will be submitted the testimony of the evidence tending to show insanity will be the wandering, restless life of the prisoner. TOMBS POLICE COURT. A Sweet Transaction, with Bitter Results. Before Justice Bixby.

Josiah Carpenter, of the firm of Carpenter & Richardson, of No. 146 Reade street, was arraigned yesterday on a charge of obtaining goods under faise pretences. It appears from the affidavit of George W. Anderson, a freight forwarder at pier 29 North River, that twenty-one barrels of sirup had been sent by the steamer Manhattan, from Charlestom. S. C., to Joseph Carpenter, of Providence, R. I., on the 28th of December, 1873, and arrived here on the 3d of January, 1874.

On the day of their arrival Anderson states that the defendant, Carpenter, called on him, and said that he was the consignee and that he had concluded not to let the goods go on to Providence, but to dispose of them here. On the strength of Carpenter's statements Anderson permitted him to have the goods, which the prisoner is supposed to have disposed of, as they could not be found.

He was held in $2,000 ball to await trial.

THE JEOPARDIZED CHURCH AT ORANGE.

Bishop Corrigan has issued another circular appeal to the churches of his diocese in relation to the jeopardized St. John's church at Orange. He is thankful that during the past week the indebtedness of the church has been diminished $60,000. This reduction is due chiefly to the kindness of its creditors, who, in order to facilitate the rescue of the church, have generously waived a large portion of their own claims. It is hoped that the other creditors, who have not yet been heard from. will be able to imitate and rival this encouraging example. The Bishop, however, wants not only the interest on the great debt provided for, but the principal so reduced that the church can itself carry the remainder and ultimately throw it aside, too. He recommends that subscription committees be organized in the several parishes to receive other and larger sums than are likely to be given to this cause in an ordinary Sabbath collection. If the diocese could raise $70,000 the work would be done, as the balance could be carried by the parish. One church in Newark (St. James'), has already pledged $5,000 if necessary. We have seventy-one churches, with resident pastors, besides missions. It is evident that this sum could be raised in proportionate amounts in a short time, and in that way the work would be accomplished. The method the Bishop suggests, judging from experience, will be attended by the happlest results. In every parish of the diocese there are open hands and generous hearts that will not miss what is thus given for God's glory, and who, even if they feel the sacrifice they are making, will be rewarded by the very feeling that they are making a sacrifice for God. This circular letter is to be read in all the churches of the diocese to-day, and the response will, no doubt, be prompt and generous. the interest on the great debt provided for, but

STREET CLEANING.

Continuation of the Investigation by the Legislative Committee.

Oliver Charlick in an Ugly Place-He Once Paid for What He Has Been Recently Getting for Nothing-Captain Thorne's Views on the Duties of a Superintendent-"Dump" Dodges Explained.

The Legislative committee having in charge the investigation into the Street Cleaning Bureau continued their labors yesterday at the Pitth Avenue ance. The session lasted from eleven o'clock A. M. until nearly six o'clock P. M., and a mass of evidence was taken, much of it being merely of minor importance and a repetition of details consequent upon testimony already before the committee. Among the most important items of the testimony was the statement in contradiction of what had been already sworn to, that Mr. Charlick had paid, during Brown's contractorship, the sum of $6,000 for the privilege of having the "stuff dumped at his dock—a privilege which, it is claimed, he has recently had for nothing, for the reason that it was the most convenient place for getting rid of the "stuff." Captain Thorne was again upon the stand, and was subjected to a lengthy cross-examination by Attorney General Barlow. Captain Thorne insisted that the dumping was done at Charlick's dock because it was an advantage to the city to have so convenient a place. He did not pretend that he ever estimated the difference in the cost between dumping it there and elsewhere, but he seemed convinced himself that what he had done was right, his idea being that his chief business was to get the dirt from the streets at all events. Direct testimony was given against him by more than one witness. The testimony was empartic against the present system of street cleaning, it being sworn to that the streets could be cleaned for less than $1,000,000, while the appropriation asked for last year was $1,486,800. This subject is yet to receive unther development, and on Monday George Middleton and others thoroughly lamiliar with the systems of street cleaning in this city will be put upon the stand as experts. The Chairman announced the names of several important witnesses whom the Sergeantar-Arms will be compelled to bring to the iront on Monday next, in case they do not voluntarily appear.

THE M'NAMARA MURDER

Leahy Committed to the Tombs Without Bail.

The Coroner's Inquest Yesterday-Conflicting Testimony Regarding the Shovel Which McNamara Had in His Hand-The Detective's Story of How It Happened : "The Light Went Out and the Pistol Went Off"-The Verdiet of the Jury.

At about half-past eleven o'clock yesterday morning Coroner Woltman began the inquest into the manner of the death of Michael McNamara, who was shot by Detective Leaby on the morning of the 22d of February.

The court room was crowded with detectives and friends of the detective band who made the descent on McNamara's house. The widely diverging stories of the friends of deceased and Officer Reilly leaves little doubt but that some one is be seen. The major part of the testimony published below goes to show that the entry of the officers was botsterous and excited. There is something wrong about the shovel story, for Mrs. McNamara and Mrs. Murphy swear to different shoveis as the one used by deceased.

THE PROCEEDINGS. After the Coroner had sworn the jury and told them of the duty devolving upon them the Clerk called Rose McNamara, the wife of the murdered man. She is seemingly about twenty-five years of age, and gave her testimony in a broken way, with a broad Irish accent. She said she lived at No. 530 West Thirty-ninth street; that on Sunday morning, February 22, about three o'clock, six men came up the stairs of her house, and when opposite her door they began to kick and call to be let in; her husband jumped out of bed and told her let in; her husband jumped out of bed and told her and the children to keep quiet; he then got the shovel and braced himself against the door. (The shovel was here produced, witness recognizing it as the one which her husband had had in his hand on the morning in question. It is a small ordinary stove shovel, weighing probably about two pounds. The men who came to the door did not say what they wanted, and did not show any shield or sigu by which she could have known they were officers or detectives; after a little tussle outside the door was opened, and while it was ajar a shot was fired by one of the intruders; the ball found a lodgment in the stomach of McNamara, making a hole just above the navel; after the husband had been shot four men came in, and one of them, a dark-complexioned man, cocked a pistol under McNamara's ear; when the intruders found they had shot my husband they brought him down stairs to the street, and then, for the first time, they told who they were and what they wanted; they then sent the wounded man to Bellevue Hospitial, where he died. Mrs. McNamara states that she had heard that there was a desperate character in the house; she had heard that a police officer had been shot at by some one down stairs; no strange man was in her room on the night in question, and there had been none for a week previous; on the morning in question a woman named Mary Murphy was in the apartments of the McNamaras', and she had her calld with her.

Mrs. McNamara having signed her testimony the and the children to keep quiet; he then got the

MRS, MURPHY'S STORY.

Mrs. McNamara having signed her testimony the woman Murphy was called to the stand. She said that on the morning of February 22, about half-past four o'clock, she was awake giving a drink to her baby, and hearing a noise outside, she called Mr. McNamara, who jumped up and took a shovel, with which he blocked the door. (Shovel shown to previous witness produced, but denied by witness, who said the one Mr. McNamara had was a working shovel, with which he worked in the working shoves, which was put under the lock and Mr. McNamara never lifted it to strike any one; the men outside pusied so hard that they moved the love and so will be the sound of the door and the door frame he fired a pistol shot through the panel of the door and the door frame he fired a pistol shot through the panel of the door and shot Mr. McNamara in the stomach; when the dark man had done this he threw the pistol on the floor and pointed another one at Mr. McNamara's head; Mr. McNamara, nis wife and witness asked the man with the pistol for Jesus' sake to spare the man for his children; she thinks that unless they asked so hard the man would have shot Mr. McNamara in the head; then the rest of the men went into the room and looked around, but finding nothing they went down to the street; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; in a rew minutes they came back and Ericet; and of the wanted to leave the room, for they did not know who the men were; flaulty a policeman in uniform came up stairs, and when he said it was nest to go to the doctor McNamara went with his wife's consent; when the wounded man got to the street they (the men who had shot him) put him in a coach and sent him to the hospital; the intruders never told who they were until they got to the street the second time.

MRS. MFAY ON THE DETECTIVES' VISIT.

Mrs. Margaret McFay, a widow who lives in the same house a Mrs. McNamara, says she was a ramping lect; soom for minutes the p

When the verdict had been recorded Coroner Woltman, by advice of Assistant District Attorney Rollins, committed Lealy to the Tombs, without ball, and he was taken in charge by an officer and brought to the Centre Street Castle.
